Ginger Ginger is a good grammar check tool you can use to proofread and scan your work for a vast range of writing errors. Such errors include grammatical, spelling, punctuation, sentence structure, and style errors. Among the unique features of this tool include a rephraser to improve clarity and style with alternatives optimized to your context. The rephraser also identifies errors in your writing, including subject-verb agreement. Ginger also offers a translator that can translate more than 60 different languages to and from English and a text reader that reads your written text back to you. The tool can catch errors in your emails, texts, and social media posts, and provides personalized practice sessions based on your writing, to address your weak points and give you feedback on why they're incorrect. Ginger reveals the word count, character count, and sentence count for your content. However, the software is limited in terms of the number of characters it can check unlike other grammar check software on this list that can take a lot more, including entire documents. Ginger's free grammar checker offers basic features that check grammatical, spelling, and other errors. Ginger Premium version offers more advanced features and more context for the errors it identifies, including rules like subject-verb agreement. You can also learn grammar lessons and tests through the virtual tutor for better grammar. Hemingway also flags the use of excessive adverbs, passive voice, and complex phrases using green, blue, and purple colors respectively. If you have your PC or Mac laptop, you can use Hemingway Editor anywhere you write, whether you're at the beach, on the train, or in a coffee shop with a spotty internet connection. Hemingway also helps you format your prose when you want to add bullets, bold, or italics to your text, all at the click of a button. You can also publish directly to WordPress and Medium as Hemingway integrates with both platforms. Hemingway handles all that you need for a web page from formatting to HTML headings, links, and more, and once you're ready to publish, you can markdown for your CMS or blogging platform or export as HTML. Hemingway also makes it easy to work with other editors. The app can import text from Word .docx files so that you don't have to copy and paste between programs as you would with Grammarly. You can do this by saving a PDF of the text and then sending it to them. Hemingway Editor Pricing The online version of the Hemingway Editor is free. SpellCheckPlus SpellCheckPlus is an affordable grammar check software that helps you learn more about writing, especially if English isn't your first language. The tool is a barebones grammar checker but it offers summaries about the errors it finds in your writing and provides context. SpellCheckPlus also doesn't let you add custom words to a dictionary, use it outside of a browser, specify writing styles, and so on. However, if you want a free and effective tool to use for quick checks, SpellCheckerPlus allows you to check extracts of up to 2,000 characters. Anything beyond the 2,000-word limit will require an upgrade to the premium plan. SpellCheckerPlus doesn't overwhelm you with errors like other tools listed here, but it uses process-based learning so you can fix one error at a time. The tool also explains to you why you're committing spelling and grammar errors and gives you directions on what to do to address the errors. SpellCheckerPlus Pricing SpellCheckerPlus is available for free, but the premium SpellCheckerPlus Pro plan costs $14.99 for a one-year license, which removes ads and any restrictions you'd find with the free version. SpellCheckerPlus Pros and Cons Pros Cons Limited featuresWorks only on a web browserThe free version contains ads 9. GrammarChecker If you want to check your writing for grammatical, misspelling, punctuation, and stylistic errors, GrammarChecker is simple and easy to use. GrammarChecker can help you to find suitable synonyms, swap out words, automatically rewrite shorter pieces of writing, and more to get an SEO-friendly, plagiarism-free text. The tool may not be as accurate as others we've already mentioned above because it doesn't have AI or NLP features or other advanced capabilities. However, you can use it if you want a free tool for your casual writing needs. To use GrammarChecker, write out your text as you would in any word processing program, review for yourself, and then paste it into the checker's online form. Press the Free Check button and see if GrammarChecker picks out any errors. GrammarChecker displays underlined suggestions for grammatical and stylistic errors and misspellings so that you can click on them for more options. It checks your spelling and usage of grammar usage automatically and then gives you a verdict based on what it detects. The Deep Check button in GrammarChecker checks your text and detects even more hard-to-spot errors like dangling modifiers or run-on sentences. You can start with a free version, which most of these 10 tools offer, though with limited features and other restrictions. Alternatively, if you want to go directly for the premium tools, you can check which one has everything you need for your writing work and that fits your budget. All of the grammar check software we've mentioned are great. However, the very best among them will give you all the basic features you need including spelling, style, and punctuation features but also gives you advanced features that check sentence structure, plagiarism, intent, and tone, plus more. Our winner for this round though is Grammarly.
